Note: Since most applicants apply to several schools, the number of applications shown in this table is significantly higher than the number of individual applicants shown in Table 3.

¹Applicants for University of North Texas Health Science Center/Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine use the Texas Statewide Application Service.

²New York College of Osteopathic Medicine's data include the Accelerated Program for Emigre Physicians (APEP) students.

³The Edward Via Virginia College of Osteopathic Medicine at Blacksburg, Virginia, admitted its first class in Fall 2003. Lake Erie's branch campus at Bradenton, Florida, and Touro University College of Osteopathic Medicine branch campus at Henderson, Nevada, admitted their first classes in Fall 2004. (LECOM reported the applicant pool for both campuses as a combined number for Fall 2004.) Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine branch campus at Suwanee, Georgia, admitted its first class in Fall 2005.
