Annual Report Second Place: Midwestern University

Dear Friends of Midwestern University,

Midwestern University has a long, established legacy of caring for others in our community. Caring for those in need of affordable health care through our clinic operations, caring for our community, and caring for each other. In this edition of the Midwestern University President’s Report, we are sharing with you some very significant stories of our faculty and staff who are our measuring stick for excellence while caring for all of those around them.

Community service is important to our faculty, staff, and students. We work hard to help educate and care for others in many of our activities and programs. We highlight for you in this edition, showing how we are truly committed to the health and wellness of our community. This year, we were moved to tears by the number of ways the students’ hard work and time made meaningful connections to the individuals’ health through our multiple service programs. It is wonderful to see the positive impact that we are able to make.

Earlier this year, we lost a loyal and devoted member of our Board of Trustees, Dr. Eugene Hurley. His service, spirit, and caring impacted generations of students and alumni. Dr. Hurley retired from the Chicago College of Osteopathic Medicine (CCOM) in 1990, served as President of the College in 1994, and was a member of the University’s Board of Trustees from 1998 to 2017. His service and dedication have been invaluable in the development of Midwestern University.

CCOM in 1996. These three generations highlight the impact an institution such as ours can have on one family as they become members of our large community.

This President’s Report also highlights how all of our care and commitment to students and the community made over the past year are aligned with our goals, as well as the significant impact they have had on our students and programs to make them as successful as possible. We are thankful for all of our donors and those who contribute. Gifts from students, faculty, and staff all go toward our missions of providing a quality education in a caring and supportive environment. Through the generosity of our donors, we are able to support our students, provide scholarships, and fund international immersion that fulfill our mission of caring for others.

Thank you for your gift. Thank you for caring about Midwestern University, and for making our legacy of excellence possible.

Sincerely,

Kathleen H. Gapen, Ph.D.
President and Chief Executive Officer, Midwestern University

Harrogate, Tennessee, December 23, 2017 – Christmas came early for 11-year-old Macy Presley and seven-year-old Christopher Olivera, both of Loudon, Tennessee, who had their first fitting of custom 3-D printed prosthetic hands on December 11, 2017. The hands were a gift from Lincoln Memorial University-DeBusk College of Osteopathic Medicine (LMU-DCOM) student, Cole Carter.

Carter has always had an interest in technology. As a master student at LMU, Carter volunteered with e-Nable, a global nonprofit that gives 3D printed prosthetic hands to those in need. Three dimensional printed prostheses have been shown to be beneficial due to their durability, light weight composition, and low cost. Due to the high cost of production for traditional prostheses, and because children tend to quickly outgrow prostheses, Carter wished to explore how 3D technology could help meet a need for children in the Appalachian region. The result was a research project at LMU entitled, “Using 3D Printed Prosthetic Hands to Improve the Quality of Life of Appalachian Children.”
The second annual Student Wellness Week was held to help break the stigma surrounding mental health issues often found among medical students. Events during the week helped students deal with their rigorous academic schedules.

A study published in late 2016 in the Journal of the American Medical Association reported some sobering statistics about the mental health of medical students. 27 percent reported having depression or symptoms of it, and 11 percent reported suicidal thoughts. What’s more, medical students were up to five times more likely to have depression than those in the regular population.

“These students are engaged in pretty rigorous academic programs,” said Ruth Conboy, DNP, a personal support counselor in the Office of Student Affairs. “The ability to sustain and model personal health and well-being is a skill we hope to instill in our students, who will be tomorrow’s healthcare leaders.”

"Upon graduation from college, I had no expectations of becoming a pharmacist, but I gravitated toward the field and pursued education in pharmacy. My father, a pharmacist, always encouraged me to pursue my dreams, and I followed his advice. As a result, I became a pharmacist, and I continue to enjoy a rewarding career in healthcare."

"Since the 1960s, I've been passionate about improving health care for minorities. I've dedicated my career to this goal, working tirelessly to create a more equitable healthcare system. My parents, both doctors, instilled in me the importance of giving back to the community, and I've been committed to serving my patients and community for decades."

HEALTH CARE ON A SMALL SCALE: ONE STORY AT A TIME

Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine Class of 1971

"Philanthropy is a powerful tool to improve health care for underserved communities. Over the years, I've been fortunate to work with organizations that are committed to making a difference, and I've seen firsthand the impact of their work."

Happy Holidays!
From the BCOM family to yours, we wish everyone a happy and healthy season of giving.

BCOM's mission is all about serving the community, and the students, faculty, and staff stepped it up this year with donations of time, clothing, and gifts. From the ten medical students who helped serve food during a volunteer shortage at El Calidito Soup Kitchen to the more than 52,000 dollars worth of toys and gifts collected for Las Cruces children, the spirit of the season is alive and well on campus. Read on to see where else BCOMers are spreading holiday cheer.

6 YRS @ 1 COMMUNITY

The Transformative Care Continuum is an accelerated program, from medical school through residency, with deep experiences with patients and health care delivery teams at its foundation. Classes begin August 2018, with a target completion of residency in 2024. Students will be embedded into their clinical sites within their first days of medical school, progressing at that same site through to graduation, residency and board certification. Cleveland Clinic anticipates hiring successful graduates to serve as primary care leaders within its system.
