125 YEARS

EDUCATING LEADERS'23

BALTIMORE | APRIL 26-28

CONFERENCEPROGRAM

WELCOMEMESSAGE

FROM AACOM'S PRESIDENT & CEO

AACOM
CELEBRATING
125 YEARS

Dear Colleagues,

It is my distinct pleasure to welcome you to Educating Leaders 2023, the AACOM Annual Conference. While all conferences are special, this one is especially so as it marks our association's 125th anniversary.

I have called Maryland home since 2019 when I became the president and CEO of AACOM. So, I am particularly excited for Educating Leaders to be in Baltimore this year! Leaders in this city have been awaiting the opening of the Maryland College of Osteopathic Medicine at Morgan State University. This will be the nation's first osteopathic medical school at a historically Black college and university (HBCU), and the first medical school to open at an HBCU in nearly 50 years.

From our first class in 1892, which included six women, to Dr. Meta L. Christy's graduation in 1921, when she became the nation's first African American DO, we've pushed barriers to promote whole-person care in the places where it is needed. The trailblazing legacy of our past continues to inform our present and future. Our new brand identity and website, which we launched earlier this year, accompany our renewed emphasis on raising our voice to strengthen osteopathic representation and influence.

Dr. A.T. Still's bold leadership set a strong example of what is possible when you follow the right, yet sometimes hard, path. I could not be prouder of this association and the entire osteopathic medical education community for standing up in support of our students and working together to create an equitable Match process. By raising our voice, we are seeing what is possible as we work to establish a well-earned seat at the table in the house of medicine, not only for ourselves, but for our patients.

We are guided by a vision of ensuring that every patient has the opportunity to receive care based on osteopathic principles and practice. The actions we take today will ensure that patients 125 years from now and beyond will know the health and healing that osteopathic care can provide.

Welcome to Educating Leaders 2023. Let's use this time together to look back at all we've achieved, get excited about the road ahead and recommit to why we educate future DOs—because we are called to care and inspired to cure.

Kind regards,
